“I was a soldier and I didn’t feel like I needed a place for women only. I was wrong. America still does not quite get that there are three million women that have defended this nation. We get to tell their stories individually and collectively. Let the generations know that women in uniform also guaranteed our freedom, that our resolve was just as great as the brave men who stood among us.”

- Military Women’s Memorial President and retired U.S. Army Chief Warrant Officer Phyllis Wilson
